Variety 194

Change is a continuous process we experience in life. For the variations we at Parkland encounter, we must have the initiative to meet challenges. We acquire distinction as a team when we join together. By discovering ourselves in change, we gain knowledge and a sense of direction. The variety in all our lives leads to the conclusion that the only constant is change.

Carl Huffstetler practices his blocking by using a blocking machine.

John Kiger practices with the marching band on a summer evening.

Improvements to the building included landscaping and a ramp for handicapped students.

The 1978-1979 school year actually began during the summer. Practices were held by the cheerleaders, Dixie Debs, flag girls, football team, majorettes, and marching band. Inside and out, the building was readied for the upcoming and returning students. Everything was prepared for changes to come.

Mustang spirits joined together when the band began to play our theme song, "The Horse," at football games. Spectacular halftime shows and familiar cheers unified fans.

Seniors returned to face many changes during their final year. Unscheduled time became restricted study halls, and once care-free students made serious plans for college or careers.

Guidance counselor Miss Lynn Ballowe answers Lisa Welch's questions about her college choices.

When we began this year, we encountered many changes: changes in school procedure, in each other, and in ourselves. Like the true Mustangs we are, we faced these changes with distinction as we learned and grew together.

Variations

Clubs serve the community and improve the school spirit. Through fellowship, projects, and fund-raising activities, each club grew from the challenges the members encountered. Although each club had variations of goals, the people strove to improve over the past, to change.

"We tried to promote good relationships among students."

Mr. McDonald

Publicizing the history of the blacks was a major objective of the Afro-American Society. During Black History Week club members gave every teacher a rose. Each month a four-member committee was selected to choose a "Teacher of the Month." Other activities included providing food for a local needy family and celebrating a successful year with an after-prom dance, which featured a live band.

The Anchor Club planned activities to serve the school and the community. To support the athletic program, club members sold programs at football games and ran the "coat check" at home basketball games. For other service projects, members rang bells for the Salvation Army, visited the Children's Home once a month, and took small gifts to children in hospitals at Halloween. Members also attended church with Key Club members, went to the District Meeting at the A.L. Brown High School in Kannapolis, and sold doughnuts as a fund-raising project.

"It enables you to express your creative abilities."

Sheri George

Sponsored by faculty member Ms. Carleen Davis, students interested in art joined together to express themselves creatively. Members held an Art Festival, for which students submitted their work and displayed it in the Art Court. Visiting the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art and the Piedmont Craftsman's Show were a few of the activities in which Art Club members participated.

Fifteen spirited Mustang Cheerleaders animated the football and basketball teams throughout the season. Practicing during the summer and three hours after school every day perfected their techniques. For the first time Cheerleaders attended the Cheerleader Spirit Conference to gain new ideas for cheers and stunts. Performing in Winston-Salem State's Homecoming parade and the Christmas parade and participating in the Spirit Competition at Hanes Mall were among their community-related activities.

"Being able to work has helped make me more outgoing."

LaDonna Pierce

Students enrolled in Distributive Education classes made up DECA. This organization, considered part of the curriculum, gave a social and competitive outlet to 113 students who went to work and did not have time to participate in after-school activities.

A major change in DECA this year was the increased interest of students in club contests. Eight delegates and faculty member Mrs. Marty Platt attended a Southern Regional Conference in New Orleans where students attended workshops designed to prepare them for contests later in the year. Topics included food marketing, food services, general merchandising and apparel and accessories.

Several Parkland students won recognition at the District Leadership Conference held at North Forsyth. Chris Pennell won first place in public speaking, and Jewel Cleary, first place in sales demonstration. Angie Love was awarded second place for sales demonstration, and Tammy Norman, third place for job interviews.

"Creative formations were a change from traditional routines."

Sandy Muncus

Varying their routines from former years by performing in several on the field formations gave the Dixie Debs a new style. Led by Chief Lori Gray and Co-chiefs Sandra Black and Pam Cook, Dixie Debs provided halftime entertainment at football and several home basketball games.
Other performances included The Frank Spencer Tournament and The Christmas Parade. Faculty sponsor for these 42 dancers was Mrs. Selvey Boyer.

"Technical preparations of the stage are most important."

Tony Pass

Providing moral support for the Parkland Players, the Drama Club shared many of the Players' most important responsibilities. Technical lighting of the stage was handled mostly by the president of the club, Barry Poteat. Club members added the tickets for Showcase Theatres, ushered for the performances, created all the posters for advertising, and wrote the programs for the audiences.

To set aside a portion of the treasury for a scholarship fund to send a club member to a French cultured area for a few days during the summer was the main goal the French Club set for the year. Holding meetings once a month at the homes of members and at restaurants serving French food, club members planned activities to give them greater insight into the customs and culture of the French. Recording a tape of French songs and going Christmas caroling were some of those activities.

Future Business Leaders of America members are part of a national organization for high school students involved in business and office programs. Parkland's members attended the District Meeting and competitive events at West Forsyth High School and the National Convention at the Hyatt House. Competitive events included accuracy and speed in the skills of shorthand and typing. The club's fund-raising activity was selling candy. Members decorated the faculty lounge at Thanksgiving and gave a Christmas party at the Children's Home.

Karen Corn

Members of the High I-Q Team practiced approximately two hours each day and studied subjects such as Anatomy, Biology, Chemistry, English, History, and Physics in preparation for the High I-Q Bowl, sponsored by the Greensboro Youth Council. Drilled by their advisor Miss Rachel Campbell, members competed with schools throughout the state. The highest eight teams out of forty qualified for television coverage. "Student awareness is our first priority."

Dennis Craft

To improve student awareness of activities, not only inside Parkland but also in the surrounding community, was the new goal of the Hitching Post. The staff members obtained more knowledge about the process of printing a newspaper by working in the Kernersville News Office. Working towards a larger issue this year, the staff wrote a variety of articles to educate and entertain their readers. With the encouragement and support of the new advisor, Mrs. Fran Ludtke, the Hitching Post was developed through creative thoughts and hard work to be a newspaper of the highest quality for Parkland.

Regular and alternate Junior Board members were selected by their homerooms as representatives at the Board's bi-monthly meetings. The general goal of the organization was to encourage juniors to take an active part in school activities, such as pep rallies and Spirit Week. The Board appointed a history committee to take pictures of junior class activities and to collect information to use in the Class Day program for next year when members will be seniors.

"Marching Band stimulates school spirit."

Teresa Franklin

The true arouser of the crowd was the Marching Band. From the first notes of music to the last beat of the drum, the band inspired spirited Mustangs to cheer on their team at football games and pep rallies. Led by Drum Majorette Debbie Collins and Drum Major Alton Vinson, the Marching Band promoted school spirit throughout the year. Mr. Robert Hunt, faculty sponsor, directed the band's performance in the Winston-Salem State Homecoming Parade, in the Christmas Parade, and at JROTC inspections.

"Being a member makes the years of study worthwhile."

Carol Christmas

Members of the National Honor Society were selected from the top thirty students of the Senior Class on the basis of their outstanding academic achievement. These students served as aides for teachers and ushered at all assemblies. A new contribution to the student body was their tutoring program. An annual activity sponsored by the NHS is the Queen of Clubs Pageant. Funds from the sale of M & M's were used to finance the organization's activities.

A new group this year, Pages, represents students who work during their study halls in the library, resource center, guidance department, attendance office, and the main office. Although the group is not organized formally as a club that participates in activities or in fund-raising projects, it is composed of students who help the school in many ways. Pages perform such tasks as helping students find information, keeping records of books circulated, filing books, answering the telephone, taking messages, and organizing locator cards.

Having learned the cheerleaders' chants at practice sessions, Pep Club members inspired other fans to more animated cheering during the games. Making posters and selecting an "athlete of the week" were two additional activities. Final plans for organization of the club were not complete until after football season, but the enthusiastic members made up for the time that was lost. Members cheered for the Mustang Basketball Team and for the Wrestlers.

The Red Cross Club was a service organization associated with Winston-Salem's Red Cross Chapter. Members assisted in organizing the blood drive at Parkland and at Benton Convention Center, and they collected money in homerooms for Red Cross funds. At Thanksgiving members made tray favors for hospitalized people. Christmas was merrier for many orphans at the Children's Home when they received gifts and red stockings at a party prepared by Red Cross members.

"Much participation in making decisions made their ideas work."

Mr. Marion Griffin

To represent and to fulfill the interests of the Class of 1979 were the main goals of Parkland's Senior Board. Members, chosen from homerooms, selected the graduation invitations and measured seniors for caps and gowns. The theme, decorations, and entertainment for the prom were all responsibilities of the board. From lists suggested by the board, seniors decided upon the class motto, flower, and colors. Preparation for Class Day was an all-year activity.

Service Teens, the official school hostesses, acted as guides during PTSA meetings and served refreshments to faculty and parents. To honor the faculty, club members had teas after school in the library, decorated the lounge, and often provided refreshments during holidays. At the State Wrestling Tournament, held in February at Parkland, Service Teens were on duty as ushers, and they supplied change for participants who wanted snacks from vending machines. Two successful bake sales raised funds for the club. Members also sold t-shirt transfers and posters.

El Circulo Espanol was a club that enjoyed learning about Spanish culture. Christmas was a busy time for members. They planned a party and drew names to purchase gifts for each other, and they sponsored a needy family for a Christmas meal. Spanish Christmas carols added to the Christmas assembly when the members sang. The club's fund-raising activity was selling doughnuts. A major change for the club was a big increase in membership.

"Capturing the year in one book was a memorable experience."

1979 Spectatus staff

Learning and searching for ways to record the events and memories of this year, the Spectatus Staff found that publishing a yearbook was more than just putting words and pictures on a page. The staff began meeting four to six hours a week in early August to make preparations for the 1979 Spectatus. Drawing lay outs, writing copy, and cropping pictures were challenges met to fulfill every deadline. Pressures, tears, and late-night hours unified the staff and created an annual to be proud of and cherish.

"We try to get the student body involved in school activities."

Chucky Hughes

Unifying the student body by coordinating school wide activities was the main objective of the Student Association. Members, elected by petition, were each assigned a homeroom. Reporting to the homeroom about planned activities and taking suggestions from the students were duties of each member. The Association coordinated Open House, Homecoming, holiday assemblies, and Spirit Week. Members chose a "secret teacher" to whom they presented a thoughtful gift on special occasions.

Club life brought students together to share common interests, and added vitality to the everyday routine of school. Membership in one or more of Parkland's thirty-six clubs and organizations gave special meaning to school by providing students an opportunity to meet new people and to make new friends. Academically related clubs gave students time to make in-depth studies of special areas. Visiting rest homes, taking gifts to children's centers, and working with needy families were examples of ways that service clubs reached their goals. Other clubs were organized to represent spirit and enthusiasm for the Mustangs. For all those who joined a club, the sense of involvement and companionship were important in shaping their lives.

Initiative

Long hours of strenuous practice gave the athletes strength and endurance to combine with their own initiative to succeed. Over all, the spirit of the Mustang maintained a closeness between the players and the fans through victories and defeats.

"Every team member played wholeheartedly throughout every game."

Coach Don Puckett

Although the Junior Varsity basketball team members were basically inexperienced players, their incredible determination to win and their increasing skill in playing a strong 2-1-2 zone defense, which held their opponents to an average of only 56 points per game, helped them surge ahead to win the last three games and to move Parkland to third place at the end of the regular season. "Young and willing."

Coach James Moose

The boys' track team began the season by practicing hurdles, relays, the shot put, and the 100-yard dash. Doug McClean, Guy Carswell, and Lloyd Cuthrell — the three returning seniors — were joined by twenty-three juniors.

1. Rowland Cloud practices hurdling.
2. The track team runs the first warm-up laps of the season.
3. Ronald Penn and Jackie Jordan run laps.
4. Mike Smith practices the shot put.
5. Front Row: Merle Robinson, Bill Bradley, Jay Garr, Larry Oglesby, Dean Hutchins; 2nd Row: Guy Carswell, Randy Reinisch, Jeff Prince, Brian Sink, Ronald Penn; Back Row: Jackie Jordan, James Brewer, Mike Smith, David Peacock, Jamie Myers, Tread Kissam.

"These girls worked harder than any I've ever had."

Coach Ann Idol

Practice for the 1979 track season began February 26 with fourteen girls turning out for the team. Cindy Terry, the only returning senior, and the new juniors prepared for five regular season meets. Teresa Woodbury, a junior who had gone to the National Junior Olympics when she was fourteen years old, helped boost the team's optimistic outlook. The players demonstrated special strength in the 100-, the 220-, and the 440-yard dashes and the 880-yard run.

"Practice and ability outweighed bad weather."

Chuck Linthicum

A strong force of returning lettermen, Chuck Linthicum, Tod Veach, and Dennis Craft, aided Greg Felts and Brett Pryor in adjusting to the Central 4-A, District 7 competition, although unfavorable weather conditions delayed practices and made the course inaccessible for the first several weeks of the season.

1. Dennis Craft finds a correct putting angle.
2. Chuck Linthicum retrieves a putt.
3. Greg Felts attempts to sink a putt.
4. Tod Veach tees off.
5. Chuck Linthicum chips out of the dunes.
6. Front Row: Brett Pryor, Dennis Craft, Coach Queen; Back Row: Chuck Linthicum, Greg Felts, Tod Veach.

Distinction

Choosing class rings, ordering invitations, and cheering "'79" or "'80" focused on distinction as classes; but long before graduation night, seniors and juniors realized that the moments they had shared would unite them as Mustangs.

1. Playing Bluegrass music is Melisa Bristow's new hobby.
2. Students enjoy the clowns at Carolina Street Scene.
3. Maceo Haywood, David Shore, Don Corley, and Lloyd Cuthrell study the score for "The Horse."
4. Bus driver Cary Cain lists repairs that need to be made on his bus.

The Senior Class of 1979 experienced many changes and new developments during their final year at Parkland. As their class flower, seniors selected the red rose, and as special class colors they chose red, white, and blue. "To accomplish great things, we must not only act, but also dream; not only plan, but also believe," was the favored class motto. According to tradition, seniors honored twenty of their classmates by selecting them for Who's Who. At the Class Day assembly, color slides shown of happenings throughout the year reminded seniors of their Mustang memories. Graduation brought the biggest change of all as seniors received their diplomas and began new careers.

Sandy Miller

Sandy Miller's lasting impression of her year as president of the Student Association was that the role had taught her a deeper meaning of the word responsibility.

Sandy was pleased with the success the students and the faculty achieved in cultivating a working relationship.

"We accomplished a number of objectives for our school," stated Sandy. In naming a few of these, she listed the new design for the cover of the student handbook, the increased awareness of the value of participating in school activities, and the maturity that students as school leaders reached in demonstrating outstanding qualities of citizenship and scholarship.

"It was unforgettable, nerve-racking, and a lot of fun."

Sherry Durham

For the three seniors from Parkland who entered the Forsyth County Junior Miss Contest, the experience proved to be an exciting time for making new friends and developing more self-confidence. Jill Champion, Sherry Durham, and Wendy Nicholson participated in the pageant, held November 11. Jill, who won the non-finalist talent award for singing, said, "Being in the contest made me more sure of myself and gave me new ideas about what I wanted to do after graduation." Wendy commented, "I made a lot of friends that I'll always remember." Winner of the scholastic achievement award for having the highest grade point average among the non-finalists was Sherry. "The only thing you have to do is be yourself," she observed.

Before the day of the pageant, the contestants enjoyed many events planned by the Jaycees and Jaycettes. First was the day when pictures of each girl were made for the program. Next was the mother-daughter tea, designed to give everyone an opportunity to get to know each other. Jill, Sherry, and Wendy also participated in a car wash at Parkway Plaza, modeled in a fashion show at Hanes Mall, and worked in the Jaycees' Haunted House in Kernersville.

Contestants: Jill Champion, Sherry Durham, and Wendy Nicholson.

"It was the most rewarding experience I've ever had.

Bill Davis

Bill Davis was one of approximately 400 North Carolina students chosen to attend the Governor's School, a six-week summer program conducted on the campus of Salem College in Winston-Salem, N.C., for students excelling in academics and the arts. According to Bill, who was selected because of his outstanding abilities in English, the school provided a "unique learning experience."

In the area of his special talent, Area I, Bill studied the themes and style of Virginia Woolf. In Areas II and III he explored the direction of contemporary thought. Bill thrived on the challenge of "taking any topic without any preconceived ideas, evaluating it and forming an opinion."

After classes, Bill and the other students remained active. Sometimes they went to Wake Forest University to do research or, just for fun, to explore Hanes Mall. Bill said that he would never forget the students whom he described as "articulate, friendly, and versatile."

When the long anticipated junior year finally arrived, many students found the busy days too short for all the exciting events on their new schedules. All juniors had to adjust to the mod system and many learned the rituals of becoming a member of various organized clubs. Waiting for the results of the new Competency Test, filling out the orders for school rings, and selecting the 24 junior marshals for 1979 were times for much patience and perseverance. There was a closeness of spirit with the seniors on their day of graduation, as the juniors saw through the seniors' eyes the time when the class of '80 would be standing on that same platform, receiving their very own diplomas.

The 1978-1979 school year brought a major change for high school juniors in North Carolina. For the first time all students were required to pass the state Competency Test, designed to assure that they have acquired the basic skills in reading and in mathematics that are needed to succeed in daily adult life.

The test, mandated by the 1977 General Assembly, was administered November 1 and 2, 1978. Special preparation for the test's so-called "survival skills" was directed by the English and the Mathematics Departments.

During the high school years four opportunities to pass the test would be offered. Students who made below 72 percent on reading and 64 percent on math would receive a certificate of attendance instead of a diploma.

Mary Johnson examines her Competency Test scores.

"Passing meant deserving a diploma."

"We were raised as individuals in spite of our likenesses."

William Carone

In the junior class this year there were seven sets of twins. Depending upon the occasion this special relationship produced pleasures or problems.

Jane and Joan Chandler and William and Jay Carone, identical twins, encountered some difficulties from people who could not tell them apart. Both sets of twins agreed that they feel closer than most brothers and sisters.

This strong emotional bond was also testified to by Cindy and David Yuenger who observed, "The only trouble we have is sharing the car."

One of the disadvantages of being a twin was pointed out by Lisa and Carla Click. "Our biggest problem is that people are constantly comparing us," they said. This complaint was the one most frequently heard from all the twins.

The twins were unanimous in their desire to maintain a seperate identity. "We are all individuals," they strongly affirmed.

A new method of teaching through contracts was used by Art faculty members Miss Lura Holley and Miss Carleen Davis. Students selected one area, such as landscapes or still-life, for individual concentration. In the spring works by art students were shown in the Hanes Mall. This annual show, sponsored by W-S/FC schools and the Mall, is a widely attended community event. Works produced by students from all classes in the art curriculum were displayed in the school art court.

At the Career Center thirty-eight occupational courses were offered as an alternative to regular electives. The courses, worth three units of credit, were intended to prepare students to go to work upon graduation or to lead to further study. Students had to take two courses, usually English and Physical Education, at their home school.

Twenty students from Parkland were enrolled in Advanced Placement courses, also offered at the Career Center. Students who received a qualifying score of three on the final examination were eligible for college credit.

To prepare Juniors for the North Carolina Competency test in reading, English Department faculty taught special lessons during regular sessions of all class levels.

English IV classes made a concerted effort to attend, as a group, Little Theatre plays. Students particularly enjoyed The Mousetrap, by Agatha Christie, in the fall.

A change for Curriculum 4 students came with their introduction to using the Wake Forest library. These college bound students found the extensive materials valuable in their research on important American novels.

The Creative Writing class published its second annual magazine, The Inklings. Seven Drama students were selected to participate in the North Carolina Theater Conference Festival at Appalachian State University in the fall. In the spring they entered the W-S/FC Festival sponsored by the State Department of Public Instruction.

"Studying a foreign language is a unique learning experience."

Larry Grogan

Students in the Foreign Language Department gained a better understanding of the culture of the Spanish and the French. The Spanish class went to Los Amigos for dinner. French class students competed in presenting plays and in reciting and singing in French at the annual Foreign Language Day program at Salem College.

German and Latin were not offered in the curriculum this year because not enough students registered to study these languages.

Forestry students studied ways to use forest land and resources for the benefit of the people. Classes applied their information by working frequently in the out-of-doors on such projects as planting, growing, and caring for trees.

Students also learned how to operate engine-powered tools, such as chainsaws, loaders, and skidders, used in the harvest of trees. Parkland was one of nine schools in North Carolina to have the use of a cable skidder, made available by the Abitibi Corporation.

Although biology is the only science required for graduation, a student may further his/her interests by studying Anatomy, Advanced Biology, Chemistry, Physics, or Physiology. Experiments, such as extracting chlorophyll from plants, dissecting a fetal pig, and typing blood, heightened the student's spirit of discovery. In February students from Parkland entered exhibits in the Science Fair, held at Hanes Mall. The field trip to the Anatomy Lab at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine was a favorite activity. Mr. Trotter was the new teacher of the third period Physics class. He also taught Physics at East and North Senior High Schools.

"Homecoming is a time for everyone to come together."

Lynn Evans

Homecoming featured a new style of ceremony. Student Association, led by vice-president Lynn Evans, incorporated soft music, such as "Feelings," and used yellow, green, and white to create a setting of elegance. For the first time in several years, the student body participated in honoring the senior football players by voting upon a queen of the court.

At the mid-morning ceremony in the gymnasium, each of the twenty-six senior football players sponsored the girl of his choice and waited as she was escorted through the decorated arch to his side. After the introduction of the court, Mr. Larrimore announced that as the result of a tie, the two queens were Pamela Hayes and Marie Ziglar. Once they had been crowned, Guy Carswell, accompanied by pianist Sherry Durham, sang "Three Times a Lady" to Pam and Marie.

"The chain link sale enhanced class competition."

Sandy Miller

Due to the snow, Spirit Week began late — Tuesday, February 13 — with '50's day followed by Wednesday as hat day, and Thursday as costume day. On Friday juniors wore red and white while seniors wore blue and white. Throughout the week the Student Association sold chain links to students during study halls and lunch periods. Seniors won the competition with 2533 chain links over the juniors' 2016.

1. O.H. Walker does not appear surprised to be walking behind Raggedy Ann (Lori Bullard) on costume day.

Traditional activities were modified by various changes this year. Instead of the customary Homecoming Court composed exclusively of princesses, this year's court was presided over by two queens, as the result of a tie. The new Inter-club Council, consisting of presidents representing each club, made fund-raising less hectic by organizing all activities. Assemblies added variety with the addition of unique stunts by the cheerleaders and original skits by the Student Association. More clubs and organizations were active in conducting initiations for their members this year than last.

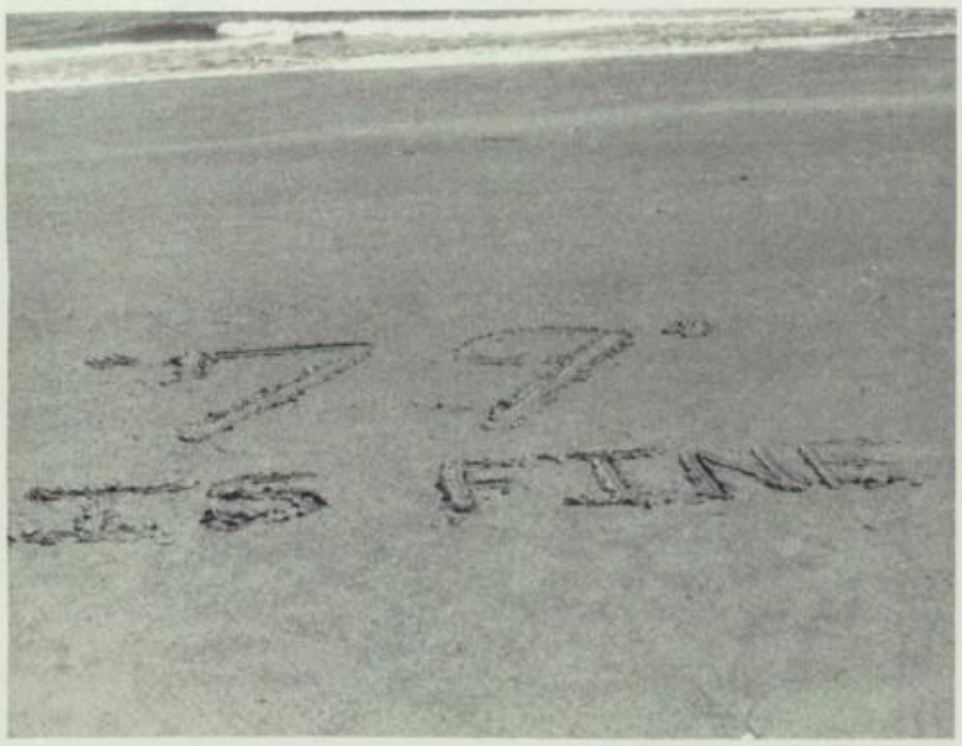
The Spectatus staff would like to thank the administration, faculty, staff, students, and special friends who helped make this Spectatus possible. We hope that we have recorded, in pictures and words, all the changes that will make this year special forever.



Closing

As the seniors exchange name cards and everyone signs annuals, it may appear to be the closing of just another school year; yet to the seniors who leave and the juniors who will return as seniors, this year was special because of changes that were faced together.

1. The setting sun closes the day.
2. J.R.O.T.C. students lower the flag as students leave at the end of the day.
3. Cheree Smothers adds an "s" to a sentimental message on the marquee.
4. Lisha Scott puts the tassel on Betty Fletcher's cap.

A Year of Change

President Jimmy Carter declared 1979 as "The Year of the Child." It was also the year for women: the ERA ratification deadline was extended to 1981 and the first women astronauts were chosen to train for 1980. President Carter asked America voluntarily to control the rising inflation. The United States improved its relations with China by the visit of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping. John Wayne battled cancer and famous figures, such as Senator Hubert Humphrey, former Vice-president Nelson Rockefeller, and artist Norman Rockwell died. Chicago was snowbound by a blizzard that deposited 82 inches of snow.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachen Begin of Israel optimistically hoped for total peace. Shah Mohammed Pahlavi of Iran "vacationed" in Morocco, leaving Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar struggling with Ayatollah Ruholla Khomeini and the masses of rebelling Iranians. The first Polish pope in the history of the Vatican, Pope John Paul II, replaced Pope John Paul I. The world was shocked by the 944 mass suicides and murders in Guyana. Technology produced four test-tube babies.

In North Carolina graduating students of 1980 took the first state Competency Test. North Carolinians were disturbed by lethal PCB spills. Each county voted on liquor by the drink.

Winston-Salem was proud to say "We're Doing It" and we have "Pride in Tobacco." The W-S/FC School Board proposed a reorganization of Forsyth County's secondary education program.

Henry Davis models his small-collared shirt, skinny necktie, pleated pants, and loafers.

Debra Carpenter models a long, knotted scarf and a loose sweater.

Candie's and Topsiders are two of the new fashions in shoes.

In fashions, the '50's look returned in the forms of pleated pants and skinny neckties. New looks were loose-fitting blouses, long scarves, and banded and wing collared shirts.

Our lives were affected not only by the changes at Parkland but also by those in the world. Our lives were influenced by movies we saw, music we listened to, personalities we admired, and inflation we endured.

We are known as juniors and seniors and we are each proud of our own class. But we are even more proud of being Mustangs. As Mustangs we have shared classes and exams, good times and bad, and even snowy weather.

Mary Wood receives a big hug from Guy Carswell.

A car slides through the snowy parking lot.

Students enjoy talking in the main hall after school.

1. The numbers on the class rings record the changing years.
2. The familiar doorway symbolizes the exit for the seniors as well as the entrance for the juniors.

Having shared this year, we will go our separate ways; yet whether we go to college, begin a career, or return to Parkland, we will always remember this special time we had together.

Spectatus 1979

This year's theme — the only constant is change — was a very personal one to Parkland students. The building was modified to meet student needs, new faculty and staff members were appointed, resource centers and guidance areas were moved, and the list goes on. But the important changes were the intangible ones within each of us. As individuals we have shared disappointments and joys, failures and victories, and tears and laughter. We're each begun to pass our earlier goals and to set new ones for our lives. We're not only aged one year but we have also matured in that same length of time, just as we will continue to do in the future. No matter how we have changed, we can see that for the rest of our lives — the only constant is change.

Working on the '79 Spectatus enabled me to change, but not without a lot of help. I owe so very much to my staff; I could not have made it without them and their support. Dr. Bernhardt worked endless hours, Mrs. Jo Walker shared her knowledge and creativity, Mr. Allen White spent long hours on our photographs, and many other people helped in more ways than I can name. I hope that my parents and those special friends who cared and stood by me at all times know how much they helped me and how much I appreciate them. I hope that the '79 Spectatus will enable everyone to remember the very special changes in his own life.

Love,
Judy
